Lesnar v. Guerrero Analysis

If there is anything we can conclude, it is that if this match can comparatively rival the promos leading up to this match, we should have a gem on our hands. Interesting that the tag involving these two had Guerrero pinning Lesnar, and while to some that would indicate that Lesnar would take this match, cannot be so certain on this end. Looking at the contribution tab on Guerrero's side, have to think he is very ready to deliver here, and Lesnar is quite capable. A little concerned with the lack of singles action for these two, but will dismiss that for now. Whether that dismissal is warranted will be definitively answered here.

Mysterio v. Guerrero Analysis

Guerrero has not seen a match since the Rumble, and Mysterio's recent, outside that strong outing with Noble three back do not impress. But Mysterio has done his best work in the title scene, as has Guerrero (albeit in tag title action). Not sure what to expect from the outside presences, but hopefully, they will limit it to cancelling each other out. At best, will be impressed. But realistically, moderate expectations will suffice.

Angle v. Show v. Cena Analysis

Angle has yet to have a bad outing, and Cena and Show rated well in their tag match recently. Contribution tabs from all three inspire to the point where this one is seemingly positioned to steal the show. Like that the lead up to this has not really involved many involving these, but enough to show that it can be good when sent off on Sunday. Though Show being disposed of early to let Angle and Cena duke it out is a prospect, cannot say that is necessarily likely. Even if it does not go that way, match should be structured well enough to be effective.

Noble v. Nidia Analysis

If the straight matchup alone could not really inspire, cannot make a case (without laughing) for the addition of the blindfold provision. Some (though little) value is possible if not drawn out. Perhaps someone can see something beyond that, but not willing to stake anything on that mere possibility.

Rikishi/Hotty v. Basham Bros./Shaniqua Analysis

The tag championships combined with a handicap setting, as Cole and Tazz remarked, can make for an oddity should any ruling apply where Shaniqua can hold title if she is somehow involved. Speaking of which, just how much should we expect her involvement? The tag title switch effort wasn't bad, and given a little more time here, they should improve off of that even despite the addition of a third on one side. But while an improvement is expected, not even close to being ready to put this even in the somewhat strong category. Wait and see.

APA v. World's Greatest Tag Team Analysis

With as good as Haas and Benjamin can be, somewhat concerned that better has not been seen in their tag efforts. In the other corner, that Faarooq has not even seen action is even more concerning. In fact, outside of the singles match between Bradshaw and Benjamin, still wondering what the rationale was for this match. Perhaps looking at the Heat slot?
