Expectations

A lot will depend on the order of the teams. Hoping a majority of the match focuses on Regal and Tajiri, which would require them to be one of the first in. Not a lot shown on the Lines scale by most of these, but with the champs running it, might be able to expect something quite reasonable.

Analysis - Kane v. Viscera

Not entirely sure what to expect from this one. Have to admit that the chase and defense angle in recent weeks has been alright and it will be somewhat interesting to see the two outside factors getting into it. Might get the most merit from Kane and Viscera as the Stratus-Lita collision carries over into the ring.

Analysis - Benoit v. Edge

You see the triple digit plus between these two back on the night after Wrestlemania and there is reason to be excited because the two should get at least that much time to work with. Hard to argue against the combination with the highest Lines fig on Raw so far. Might even challenge the high mark of 136 this year. The collisions so far have been compelling. Loving it so far.

Analysis - Jericho v. Benjamin

Like the rivalry these two have going and the segments from the Highlight Reel to Jericho's personal performance of 'Shelton is a little bitch' for Benjamin. These two were in a good match back on the fourth, albeit in a triple threat, so they have proven quite capable. Lots to like.

Even if you don't expect a lot of technical proficiency, should easily be able to look past that and find lots of value in the effect of two of the greatest the WWE has ever offered teaming up. Fun factor should be there in spades, and that should be more than enough.

Additional Odds Line

Expectations

Haven't shown a lot in their matches since Wrestlemania, but realistically, only Batista has had a true opportunity for such facing Chrisitan and to a lesser extent, Orton. So have to go back to their WM match to gauge. If you liked that one, should take to this just the same.
